Philadelphia, PA

Philadelphia in Flux is a public exploration of Philadelphia's changing communities designed to encourage productive dialogue between neighborhood residents, community leaders and public officials through a mix of data-informed, solutions-oriented narrative journalism, research and real-time discussion facilitated through four free, public events held in affected neighborhoods across the city.

This first event will kick off the series with a keynote address and panel discussion focused on how Philadelphians can come together to design civic infrastructure to meet the needs of a changing city.
